Human Rights and Foreign Policy

Summer 2006

This course examines the interaction of human rights with other foreign policy concerns, focusing primarily on United States foreign policy in the post-Cold War era. Its central concern is to explore the spaces that have (and have not) been and may (and may not) be available for the pursuit of human rights interests in national foreign policies. Grades will be based on a take-home final exam. At the end of the last class meeting I will give you the exam. You will be expected to write an essay of about 4,000 words based entirely on the required readings for the course. It will be due at the time the final exam is officially scheduled. Grades may also be raised or lowered by a "+" or "-" on the basis of class participation -- quality not quantity.
